

COMMON BLUE GRYPHDRAAGON

#79

HABITAT: Amethyst Cave

SIZE: Medium

COST:

NEST:

TRAIT: HELPFUL

This gryphdragon gets its name from its ancestors' protection of the Commons during medieval times. In exchange for protecting animals grazing in the Commons, humans gave the gryphdragon food during harvest, establishing an enduring symbiotic relationship.

COMMON GRASS LINDWORM

#17

HABITAT: Golden & Amethyst Caves

SIZE: Hatchling

COST:

TRAIT: SHY

The Common Grass Lindworm is often mistaken for a garter snake. Both species are friends to gardeners, as they keep pesky insects and rodents at bay.

CONTRARY LUNG DRAGON

#154

HABITAT: Crimson & Amethyst Caves

SIZE: Large

COST:

NEST:

TRAIT: AGGRESSIVE

The Contrary Lung Dragon received its name for its call, which sounds eerily like, "Nononono NOOOOOOOOOOO!"

COSMIC AMPHIPTERE

#162

HABITAT: Golden Cave

SIZE: Small

COST:

NEST:

TRAIT: SHY

Its "Cosmic" name comes not from any otherworldly reason, but from the glimmering of the gems and scales on its back.

CRAFTY MORAY

#146

HABITAT: Crimson Cave

SIZE: Medium

COST:

NEST:

TRAIT: SHY

The Crafty Moray was a common figurehead carved into the bows of sailing vessels during the 17th and 18th centuries. Having such a figurehead was believed to ensure good weather and provide safe passage.

CUSTODIAL KOIWYRM

#115

HABITAT: Crimson & Amethyst Caves

SIZE: Medium

COST:

NEST:

TRAIT: PLAYFUL

The Custodial Koiwurm builds elaborate nests, with nary a feather or twig out of place. In fact, a koiwurm will gift leftover food to nearby creatures, rather than sully the pristineness of its living space.